Workers' Compensation

For over 20 years, Prince Law Offices has been at the forefront of representing injured workers' rights. Whether litigating cases before judges and appellate courts, teaching continuing legal education courses to other attorneys or leading workers' compensation sections of local bar associations, our attorneys eat, speak and breathe workers' compensation law. We have not hesitated to bring our clients' cases to the Pennsylvania Supreme Court, when warranted.

We are very sensitive, and responsive to, the needs of our clients, their families and their health care providers. We recognize that the lives of injured workers may be turned upside down not only by the pain of their work injury, but also by the economic, family, and social turmoil that accompanies any injury. Our attorneys use every lawful means available to see to it that the comprehensive needs of our clients are addressed. Our support staff assists our clients with the everyday needs of injured workers, such as handling inquiries about medical examinations, transportation, unpaid medical bills, and late wage loss checks.

Our attorneys are not only experienced at fighting for you in court, but also in providing direction to your case. We make sure our clients get appropriate medical care early on, being skilled in freeing you from your employer's doctors. Once you secure treatment with a doctor of your own choosing, we work closely with their offices in reviewing your medical records.

Finally, if our clients have reached a plateau in their medical care but are unable to return to work at their regular job, we provide direction. This includes planning out their reeducation. We will also discuss the viability of filing a Social Security Disability claim.

The earlier you meet with the workers' compensation lawyers of Prince Law Offices for your free consultation, the better chances of a positive outcome to your case.
